WASHINGTON — Norman Chandler, president of the Times Mirror Co., telling a House subcommittee that Los Angeles only can support successfully two metropolitan daily newspapers:

"Los Angeles is suburbia. Los Angeles is automobile commuting, centralized shopping centers, outdoor living. In Los Angeles, any publication must compete with all these facts as well as a myriad of other media."

MIAMI — William K. Martin, 85, who followed Teddy Roosevelt up San Juan Hill in 1898, commenting about Cuba on arriving with other refugees:

"I think another American invasion of Cuba is the only solution to Castro. If I were a little stronger I'd be willing to go back myself with a gun."

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Chief Petty Officer John McCartney, recalling that he thought the Navy transport he was on was making a normal landing seconds before it crashed:

"In fact the first time we hit, I thought was just the landing gear coming down. It had that kind of thump."

Mental Health In Kentucky Today

By Harold L. McPheeters M.D.,
Commissioner
Kentucky Department of Mental Health

In previous articles in this series on mental retardation, its causes and extent, common misconceptions about the mentally retarded and identification of retarded persons.

We also mentioned the role of the home, community responsibility, and what local groups, volunteer and official agencies may do to create and maintain services for the retarded.

In other articles, we discussed programs of our institutions for the retarded and we urged more cooperation among parents, community groups, institutions and agencies.

We also listed some of the many sources of information about mental retardation and some of the sources where assistance, professional help, and guidance may be obtained.

We all must accept the fact that anything which damages the lives of 5 million people of this country is serious and that it creates health and welfare problems so extensive and so complex that just about everyone's help is needed in some way.

If these problems are to be met with any degree of success, this means parents and neighbors, teachers and doctors, social workers and psychologists, lawmakers and researchers, ministers and business people, recreation leaders and any other citizens who can make a contribution.

Our efforts here in Kentucky to provide for the mentally retarded are taking many forms. Some programs are well under way, others are in the beginning stages, and still others are being planned and studied.

The goals of these areas of endeavors are:

1. Diagnostic and clinical services available within geographic and economic reason;

2. Community inspired programs which will provide services for all the retarded who can remain in the community, and for those who return to the community from institutions;

3. Social services as an integral part of programs to include case work and group work closely allied with clinical and rehabilitation services;

4. Counseling of parents of the mentally retarded through clinic staffs, nurses, psychologists, school people, social workers, and physicians;

5. Special education classes for many of our retarded children who may be able to benefit from them;

6. Vocational rehabilitation services to make it possible for a greater number of retarded persons to be placed in some type of employment;

7. Research efforts in an attempt to make breakthroughs into causes of mental retardation, to provide better treatment and training, and to learn ways of preventing retardation;

8. Personnel studies to increase the competence of professional personnel, and expansion of in-service and other training for all personnel, and stepped-up recruitment efforts to supply adequately trained people for growing programs;

9. Institutional programs which will provide facilities for more patients, offer better treatment and training programs, and which will serve as out-patient clinics, research centers, and provide diagnostic and clinical services; and

10. Information and public education on a continuous basis to keep those who work directly with the retarded up to date and to aid the general public in its effort to be informed about new techniques, new discoveries, new methods, and new programs.

'Stan The Man' Still Rocking Along At 42

By United Press International

LOUISVILLE (UP)—They ought to change the spelling of Louisville Seneca's nickname to the Redd-skinn.

But he still hasn't lost that effortless swing—and as long as he has it, he can show the young 'uns how to hit.

Musil, who hit .330 in 1955 games last season, demonstrated that he hasn't yet lost the touch with a pair of doubles Friday in the St. Louis Cardinals' 6-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Musil, Curt Flood and Tim McCarver had two hits each and George Altman homered for the Cardinals.

Stan the Man expects to play about 120 games this season and is aiming to hit 300. He's working slowly in spring training but indications are that both goals are well within his reach.

John Taboris, Al Worthington and Bill Henry combined in a four-batter that enabled the Cincinnati Reds to shade the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-1. Marty Keough doubled home Tommy Harper in the ninth inning with the winning run.

The world champion New York Yankees scored their second win of the spring by beating the Minnesota Twins, 2-1. The Twins threatened in the ninth but Jim Costas, fourth Yankee pitcher, outlasted Bernie Allen with the young run on third.

A six-run, sixth-inning rally enabled the Washington Senators to come from behind and top the Chicago White Sox, 9-6. Merv Breeding, Phil Phillips and Jim King hit homers for the Senators while Ken Berry and Dave Nicholson connected for the Sox.

Tigers Nip Braves

Paul Foytack pitched one-hit ball for four innings and hit a homer to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 5-4 triumph over the Milwaukee Braves. Bubba Phillips and Bill Freeman had key doubles for the Tigers and Dennis Merike drove in three runs for the Braves.

Jim Fregest hit two homers and drove in four runs and Albie Pearson had three singles and a double as the Los Angeles Angels romped over the San Francisco Giants, 10-0. Belinsky went four innings for the Angels and gave up only one hit.

Bob Lillis' eighth-inning single followed two errors and drove in the decisive run of the Houston Oilers' 8-7 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Colt outfielder Elton Burton drove in three runs with a triple and a homer and Bob Asperomonte knocked in two with a pair of singles.

Homers by Andre Rodgers and Don Landrum were the big blows in the Chicago Cubs' wind-plagued 12-11 win over the Boston Red Sox. Billy Gardner had three hits, including a home-run triple, for the Red Sox.

John Orsini, acquired in a winter deal with the Giants, made his spring debut and hit two homers to lead the unbeaten Baltimore Orioles to an 11-5 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in a night game at Milwaukee. Brooks Robinson also drove in four Baltimore runs and Chuck Estrada limited the Dodgers to three hits and one run through the first five innings.

of the journey. Poppy thrilled Oldham mainstay, Bobby Jenkins, following him just six points after Jenkins had tallied 83 against Hancock County Thursday.

Durbin, which has advanced further in the state tourney than any other Negro school, was back knocking at the door for the third time in the last five years after slipping Taylor County 65-64 Thursday.

The Beacaths made 55 per cent of their shots to pull a mild upset of Cledin Haskins and his teammates. Haskins was high for the game with 25 points, but Durbin's George Winton had the hottest hand. He netted 10 of 14 shots from the floor and wound up with 21 points.

As exciting as the Durbin-Taylor County game was, fans were glad to sit back and allow their blood pressure to return to normal in the Owensboro-Princeton game.

Joining Seneca in the semifinals today were Oldham County, Lexington Durbin, and Owensboro. Seneca, picked by most of the "experts" to win its first state crown, was to hook up with Oldham County in the first game today, Durbin and Owensboro meeting in the afternoon semi.

The winners of the semifinals get to rest for a few hours, then come back at 8 p.m. for the game everybody's been waiting for—the grand climax to this hectic Driftless Derby. The tourney, which had its first overflow crowd of 17,500, Friday night, was sure of another such turnout for tonight's championship game.

First Since 1946

The Eighth Region hasn't had a representative to get beyond the quarter-finals since Valley in 1946. But Oldham County ended the long drought Friday with an exciting 43-42 victory over scrappy Newport Catholic.

Fiercy Danny Shewer, a tricky left-handed dribbler, made a personal gift of the victory to retiring coach Barney Thawatt. Shewer led the Cobblers with 17 points, including the basket that won the game.

Defense predominated in this battle between two well-coached teams as Oldham got only 16 points and Newport Catholic 12 in the second half. Coach Jim Connor of the defeated Thoroughbreds got a stellar defensive performance from Phil Papp, perhaps the most under-rated player ton Dotson clash that followed Friday night.

It was all Owensboro after the opening moments. Coach Bobby Watson's Red Devils showed Dotson's "fast-break" to a walk and cooled off the Beacath gunners to such an extent that Dotson connected on only 25 per cent of its shots.

Owensboro's Charles Taylor won a scoring duel with Dotson's highly-regarded Dwight Smith. Taylor netted 26 points, while Smith was limited to 18. Smith's younger brother, Gregory, topped the losers with 15 points.

Great American Novel of Today WINTER OF OUR DISCONTENT By JOHN STEINBECK

CHAPTER 1
WHEN the fair gold morning of April stirred Mary Hawley awake, she turned over to her husband and saw him, little fingers pulling a frog mouth at her.

"You're silly," she said. "Ethan, you've got your comic genius."

"Oh say, Miss Mousie, will you marry me?"

"Did you wake up silly?"

"The year's at the day. The day's at the morn."

"I guess you did. Do you remember it's Good Friday? Will Marullo let you close the store at eleven?"

"Darling chicken-flower—Marullo probably won't show up at all. I'll close at noon. Do you suppose my great ancestors would be proud to know they produced a damned grocery clerk in a damned wop store in a town they used to own?"

"You are not. You're more like the manager, keep the books and bank the money and order the goods."

"Sure. And I sweep out and carry garbage and kowtow to Marullo."

"She put her arms around him. 'Let's be silly,' she said. 'Please don't say swear words on Good Friday. I do love you.'"

"Okay," he said after a moment. "That's what they all say."

"I was going to tell you about the children."

"They're in jail!"

"Now you're silly again. Maybe it's better if they tell you."

"Now why don't you—"

"Margie Young-Hunt's going to read me again today."

"Like a book? Who's Margie Young-Hunt, what is she, that all our swains—"

"You know it I was jealous—I mean they say when a man pretends he don't notice a pretty girl—"

"Oh, that one. Girl? She's had two husbands."

"The second one died."

"I want my breakfast. Do you believe that stuff?"

"Well Margie saw about Brother in the cards. Someone near and dear, she said."

"Someone near and dear to me is going to get a kick in the pants if she doesn't haul freight."

"Oh! You!" she said. "You always make jokes."

THE COFFEE was made and the eggs in a bowl with toast beside them when Ethan Allen Hawley slid into the dinette near the window.

"Is that the children up?" she asked.

Readers seeking to identify the fictional people and places here described would do better to inspect the book and search their own hearts, for this book is about a large part of America today.

I just go up and beat the hell out of Allen and Mary Ellen?"

"You spoil them rotten, Eth. You know you do."

"Farewell, oh ship of state," he said, and slammed the screen door after him and went out into the green-gold morning.

He looked back at the fine old house, his father's house and his great-grandfather's white-painted ship with a faint glow over the front door, and Adam decorations and a widow's walk on the roof.

The ship of Elm Street joined their tops and yellowed out in new-corn leaf. The sun had just cleared the bank building and flashed on the silvery gas pipes, starting the kelp and salt smell from the old harbor.

The old Phillips house in the second block is a boarding house now. Joe Morphy, teller at the First National, came out white-fronted and said, "Hi, to Ethan. I was just going to call on you, Mr. Hawley."

Joe looked like a horse and he smiled like a horse. Joseph Patrick Morphy, a real popular guy for one only a few years at New Baytown. A joker who got off his gags velly-eyed like a poker player, but he whinnied at other people's jokes, whether or not he had heard them.

Joe was a fascinating monkey—a gambler but no one ever saw him lay down a bet, a good bookkeeper and a wonderful bank teller. Mr. Baker, First National president, trusted Joe so completely that he let the teller do most of the work.

The two men strolled together down Elm Street toward High.

"I've been meaning to ask you. You related to Admiral Hawley?"

"Don't you mean Admiral Halsey?" Ethan asked. "We've had lots of captains but I never heard of an admiral in the family."

"I heard your granddad was a whaling captain. Kind of connected up in my mind with the admiral, I guess."

"Town like this has got myths," said Ethan. "Like they say people on my dad's side did some strange way back and my mother's family came over in the Mayflower."

"Ethan Allen—you related to him too?"

"Might be. Must be," said Ethan. "What a day—ever see a prettier? What was it you"

"Okay, bugflower—but can't damage in six counties lying on the Levisa and Tug forks of the Big Sandy at $13 million. The estimate included damage in Boyd, Lawrence, Martin, Floyd, Pike and Johnson counties, but did not include any damage along smaller tributaries of the river.

Some main highways remained blocked either by water or landslides. A huge earthslide still covered U. S. 110 at Cumberland, while Kentucky 8 at Vanceburg, and 499 and 1971 also were blocked near Irvine.

The swollen Ohio River in western Kentucky also was blocking some roads, mostly state highways running north from U. S. 60 toward the river. U. S. 60 itself was under water at the Devine-Hancock line with only trucks getting through; while state highways 271, 334, 441, 811 and 279 all were flooded north of U. S. 60.

At Louisville the Junior Chamber of Commerce, working with the American Red Cross and Civil Defense agencies, organized a campaign to collect relief supplies and cash for flood victims.

Contributions of canned and packed foods, baby food and supplies, clothing, shoes, blankets, towels, cleaning supplies such as mops and brooms, and toilet articles were sought in a full-page newspaper advertisement.

Local 89 of the Teamsters Union set up a central sorting and packing station and volunteered drivers to carry the supplies to eastern Kentucky.

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 278 It could be expected there'd be unusual activity around a place called Kelly's Ford, or Kettleville, on St. Patrick's Day. And there was, March 17, 1863.

Young Brig. Gen. William Averill's newly organized cavalry corps (Union Army of the Potomac) had been ordered to attack Confederate cavalry reported to be operating around Culpepper, Va. His quarry was his erstwhile fellow student at West Point, young Fitzhugh Lee.

[1] War artist's sketch of charge of Lee's cavalry at Kelly's Ford, St. Patrick's Day. Lee at Culpepper by telegraph at 7:30 a. m. Lee got the main force of his troopers in motion immediately and came up against the Federals, about a half-mile from the ford. Day-long charges and counter-charges ensued. Lee's 800 men with four guns stood off Averill's 2,100 men with six guns. At dusk Averill retired, the tactical loser.

"Fitz" Lee was the "laughing cavalier" nephew of Robert E. who narrowly escaped dismissal for his behavior at West Point while his uncle was the superintendent. Graduated No. 45 in a class of 49 in 1856, he earned promotion to major general when 28.
